Regardt (Reggie) Ferreira, Ph.D., is Director of Tulane University's Disaster Resilience Leadership Academy and Executive Director of the Consortium for Equitable Disaster Resilience. He is also a full professor (tenured) of social work at Tulane University in New Orleans, Louisiana. Dr. Ferreira earned his BSW and master's degree in Disaster Risk Management (cum laude) from the University of the Free State in Bloemfontein, South Africa, and his Ph.D. in Social Work (Dean citation) from the University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky. Since joining Tulane University's faculty in 2013, his responsibilities have spanned administration, research, program development, and teaching. Dr. Ferreira is the Chief Editor of the American Psychological Association's Traumatology journal, which has an impact factor of 3.2 and focuses on resilience practices among traumatized populations. He has been an active member of several national advisory committees, including those for the National Academies of Science, FEMA, and the American Red Cross. Dr. Ferreira's primary research interests lie in the areas of disaster resilience, climate change, and behavioral health, with field work extending across Europe, Africa, North America, the Caribbean, and South Asia. Over the past two decades, he has led initiatives totaling over $44 million in federal and foundation funding, contributing to significant advancements in disaster risk reduction and resilience. His scholarly output includes over 100 journal articles, book chapters, and abstracts addressing resilience, climate change, equity, and trauma. Recognized for his pedagogical contributions, Dr. Ferreira has received multiple awards for his teaching. He played a key role in the development and launch of Tulane's Doctor of Social Work and the MS-Disaster Resilience Leadership program. Prominent media outlets such as CNN, Rolling Stone, Voice of America, HBO/VICE, The Atlantic, Fox, Fox News, NBC, NBC News, CBS, ABC, Reuters, Medscape, NPR, Futurity, ScienceDaily, USA Today, Inside Climate News, Globo, and Psychology Today have featured his work. A native of Bloemfontein, South Africa, Dr. Ferreira is an avid outdoors enthusiast.

Director: Disaster Resilience Leadership Academy:

Since December 2016, I have been responsible for oversight of the Disaster Resilience Leadership Academy (DRLA) program, which includes all academic operations, personnel, research, and teaching activities associated with DRLA. Since 2016, I have grown the program from 12 students to 75 students in 2021 (a 625% increase). I am responsible for all academic operations of the MS in Disaster Resilience Leadership Studies (MS-DRLS), the dual degree (MSW/MS-DRLS), and the graduate certificate in DRLS. This includes responsibility for academic policies and procedures, justice, equity, diversity, and inclusion work, recruitment and admissions, student advising, curriculum oversight, course development, online and on-ground management, course scheduling and teaching assignments, academic program assessment, educational technology and distance education, and SACS accreditation. During my tenure, I have spearheaded three equity institutes that have been embedded in the curriculum. I oversee the recruitment and hiring of associated faculty and fellows, teaching evaluation processes, and procedures for all instruction, and developing and implementing professional development opportunities. As director, I also spearhead several interdisciplinary research and applied resilience projects. I serve on the Dean of the Tulane School of Social Work's (TSSW) executive committee and on several university-level committees related to interdisciplinary academic affairs. I assist the Dean in the general administration of TSSW and represent the school and university at selected university and community engagements. Under my guidance, the Disaster Resilience Leadership Academy received and accepted an invitation to join the prestigious Global Resilience Partnership in 2019.

PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT:

Pilot Program: “Resilience: Managing the Unexpected”

Approached by Tulane University’s senior administration to develop a place-based resilience program that will support faculty and staff in learning practical techniques to address stress and change fatigue, ultimately allowing people to embrace change and rebound quickly from adversity.

Master of Science in Disaster Resilience Leadership:

Directed the launch of the online Master of Science in Disaster Resilience Leadership to form a dual degree with the online Master of Social Work degree in 2020 and the online Graduate Certificate in Disaster Resilience Leadership. Supervision of personnel, day-to-day operations, development, program marketing, program recruitment strategy, and accreditation of a new online program. In 2014, Dr. Ferreira assisted with the launch of the on-ground version of the program.

Doctorate of Social Work:

Assisted with the development and launch of one of the first Doctorate of Social Work (DSW) programs in the United States with the Tulane School of Social Work’s Doctorate of Social Work program in 2014. Responsible for overseeing the research curriculum of the program (2014–2017). Developed a total of three research courses. Translated an on-ground research course to be online in 2019. Responsible for research practicum examination and coordination.

Study Abroad: South Africa

Developed and conducted a study abroad tour (3 credits) to South Africa in 2014 with a total of 10 students in South Africa for a period of 2 weeks that focused on experiential learning focused on educating students on community development in a developing country context. The study abroad curriculum had an emphasis on the intersection of disaster management and social work to advance community resilience.
